

Sent on behalf of Sara Ripplinger, Writer, Dean's Office:

Dear Faculty of Forestry colleagues,

The Fall issue of Branchlines is forthcoming (estimated publication date of Oct 2022) and we are interested in your article ideas for it or one of our other platforms (Alumni newsletter, social media, website stories, etc.). Feel free to suggest the work of a colleague or student, as well!

Note:

Unlike in the past, we now write the articles for you. Therefore, you only need to send us the idea. However, if you have already drafted something, feel free to send that. While we cannot guarantee that your suggestion will make it into Branchlines due to space constraints, we will do our best to find a home for it in/on one of our publications/platforms.

What we are looking for:

- Article ideas: One or two paragraphs that explain your idea/research/project/film or book project, as well as any relevant links to a published article or websites with more information.
- Women in forestry: We would like to highlight more exceptional women in forestry in upcoming issues. Please send us your inspirational story ideas.
- Student recommendations: Do you work with a star postdoc, master's or undergraduate student who you think should receive a bit of the spotlight? Please let us know!
- Photos and graphics: We include at least one of these with each article, so please let us know if you have some handy. Our resident graphic designer/photographer, Paulo, will take it from there or create appropriate imagery.

Theme:

The theme of the Fall 2022 issue is Future Forests. As such, we are especially looking for ideas surrounding innovations that are helping forestry address the challenges of a changing climate and other pressures from human activities, as well as an evolving commercial market.

How to submit:

- Please email your content ideas to me, sarah.ripplinger@ubc.ca, by June 10, 2022

I look forward to hearing from you!

>>Read the Spring 2022 issue here: <https://forestry.ubc.ca/news/branchlines>
Or pick you copy up on the FSC Atrium if you haven't already.

With thanks,
-Sarah and the Branchlines team

Sarah Ripplinger (Pronouns: she, her, hers)

Writer

Faculty of Forestry | Dean's Office

University of British Columbia | Vancouver Campus | Musqueam Traditional Territory

Email: sarah.riplinger@ubc.ca